Excerpt from College Discipline: An Inaugural Address Delivered at Davidson College, on the 28th February, 1855

Gentlemen of the Board of Trustees:

You have been pleased to call me from a noble and time-honored Institution, in part founded by, and bearing the name of, the Father of his Country, and have invited me to cast in my lot among you, and to labor in the College over which you preside.

I left a warm-hearted, generous, hospitable people, distinguished for their intelligence, piety, and high-toned principles; I left a Board of Trustees, whose unvarying kindness and confidence, no gratitude of mine can ever repay; I left a Faculty, whose venerable head, I revered as a Father, and with whose junior members, my intercourse was that of a brother; I left a College, the character of whose students was such that during six years, I received not a single mark of discourtesy, or disrespect.

Surely then, in view of the many pleasant attendants upon my life in Virginia, the motives that prompted to a change of location, could have been neither few, nor slight. Some of them only need I give.
